Office Hours: Conklin 326 Wed. & Fri. 10:25 – 11:25

Course Description: This course is a general survey of Latin American history from 1800 to the present, providing students familiarity with the region and preparing them for future, more specialized studies. While Latin America is united by a common history of Spanish and Portuguese imperialism, it is also an incredibly diverse region, presenting myriad problems for historical analysis. In this course, we will focus on popular politics and how different groupings of people found ways to campaign for rights and resources through the political and economic transformations of the last 200 years. Key themes addressed will include national identity and citizenship; gender, sexuality, and race; and globalization, human rights, and migration.

This course is founded on student-led critical analysis of historical writing and sources. Students will learn how to evaluate conflicting historical narratives and assess why and how these narratives matter. Students will consider the value of different forms of historical representation and perspective, such as history “from below,” micro-history, women’s history, global history, and biography. Students will learn how to interpret and evaluate a wide array of primary sources (including correspondence, writing, oral histories, photographs, art, video, and maps) and practice using sources to elaborate or challenge narratives about the past. In addition to a strong understanding of the major problems in Modern Latin American History, by the end of the semester students will have a strong introduction to historical thinking as an integral part of a liberal education and a way of approaching intellectual problems.

The goals of this course are to provide students with:

- a scholarly familiarity with the region and the historical problems debated both within and outside of the academy in regards to Latin American history.
- analytical skills for reading, interpreting and evaluating historical writing.
- skills for writing longer papers consisting of complex, multi-step arguments; for expressing one’s ideas succinctly, clearly and convincingly; and for making and organizing evidence-based arguments.
- skills for researching and analyzing current events in Latin America in a historical frame.

analytical skills for using a historical approach to intellectual problems of many sorts.

Please note: Latin America is a vast and diverse region, and in one semester it is impossible to cover the distinct paths of all of the region's peoples. Instead, I have by necessity been selective regarding on which nations we will concentrate. Because scholars have tended to focus their studies on just a few countries (Mexico, Brazil, Cuba, Argentina, Peru, and Colombia) this syllabus is weighed heavily towards those. If, however, you have particular interest in another country (such as El Salvador or Ecuador) please write me an email or come to me after class and I will do what I can to work it in more centrally to the syllabus.

Students will be expected to comply with the History Department's Classroom Etiquette Policy (see <http://history.rutgers.edu/undergraduate/academicpolicies>). Cell phones must be switched off and meals must be eaten before the beginning of class. Electronic devices may not be used for purposes unrelated to the class.

Books to Buy:

Esteban Montejo, Biography of a Runaway Slave (any edition)

Books should be available at both the campus bookstore in Bradley Hall and New Jersey Books, and are available through online booksellers.

All other readings will be available on Blackboard

I have selected the readings for this course to illustrate different ways historians approach intellectual problems, to challenge students to read and think critically, and to exercise students' skills in interpreting historical sources. Therefore there is no textbook for this course. Should you desire additional, more comprehensive readings that summarize the entirety of Latin American history, below is a list of optional weekly readings from:

Martin and Wasserman, Latin America and its People, Volume II, 2nd Edition.

Week 3: Chapter 8

Week 4: Chapter 9

Week 5: Chapter 10

Week 7: Chapter 11

Week 9: Chapter 12

Week 12: Chapter 14

Blackboard

All additional readings as well as powerpoint slideshows will be posted and available on Blackboard.

Assignments:

This class has four types of assignments:

- 1) Map Quiz
- 2) Six Response Papers: There will be 14 opportunities; students need only complete six. Approximately 300-400 words. For each response paper, the professor will provide a prompt related to the week's readings and/or primary sources. Response papers will be submitted either online via Blackboard or in paper and must be completed before class starts.
- 3) Two Class Presentations: Each student must one time start off discussion of the week's primary sources based on their response paper. At the end of the semester, each student will briefly present the findings and substance of their final paper.
- 4) Final Paper: For final papers, students will choose from a selection of primary sources and write a five page essay on how it reflects on and relates to one of the semester's main topics. The final paper will be submitted as a rough draft, each student will be required to give written and oral feedback on a peer's essay, and the final draft will be due the Monday after the last day of classes.

You must follow the University's guidelines on academic integrity. As is required by the department, all students are required to sign the Rutgers Honor Code Pledge. To receive credit, every major assignment must have your signature under the following phrase: "On my honor, I have neither received nor given any unauthorized assistance on this examination / assignment."

Grades will be assigned as follows:

Map quiz: 6 pts

Response Papers: 36 pts

Presentations and Class Participation: 18 pts

Rough Draft and Feedback: 10 pts

Final Paper: 30 pts

Attendance: Attendance will be taken each class period and will be consequential to your grade. Any student who misses eight or more sessions through any combination of excused and unexcused absences will not earn credit in this class. Such students should withdraw from the course.

Grades will be assigned in accordance with the scale below. Since Rutgers University does not recognize minus grades and some plus grades, minus signs and some plus signs will be omitted from the final grades submitted for the course.
